WOOD RIVER REVIEW

SEPT./OCT. 1992

Congratulations to all Wood River Manufacturing Complex employees. On Oct. 27, 1992, you reached yet two more safety milestones—6 million safe work hours and two years without a lost work day. This “best-ever” safety record at Wood River began Nov. 16, 1990.

In a recent memo, Gayle Johnson told employees that the Complex is a “safety pacesetter” in the industry, not only among Shell locations, but throughout the U.S. and the world.

“We earned this prestigious position by focusing on a common goal and by applying the very basic principle of doing each job correctly, with concern for ourselves and those around us,” he wrote.

“Individually and collectively, we exert a lot of effort evaluating the way we run our facility, with an eye on maximizing performance while minimizing health and safety risks. Safety training, prevention awareness and recognition programs are ongoing, making a positive difference as our record indicates.”

Employees also were recognized by Ron J. Banducci, General Manager, Manufacturing-Oil. In a wire received at the Complex Oct. 28, 1992, Banducci wrote: “Congratulations to all Wood River Manufacturing Complex employees for your new all-time WRMC safety record of 6 million safe hours. You gained this new record through dedication, commitment and hard work. In true quality fashion, you are demonstrating continuous improvement since reaching 1 million safe hours for the first time as a Complex on March 10, 1991.

“Success in all endeavors results only from working as a team made up of individuals, each focused on a common goal,” he continued. “You have demonstrated your skills, competence and desire to be the best as you focus on prevention. And no group of WRMC employees has ever done it better.”

Gayle Johnson asked employees to continue to keep safety at the forefront of everything they do at work and at home. “Let’s not be satisfied with our current record,” he wrote. “Rather, let’s set our sights even higher and focus on improving on our 1991 performance. We can do it...I know we can!”

WRR PARTNERS IN EDUCATION

WRMC Forms Partnership With Madison High School

Some 220 students who attend Madison High School are getting some extracurricular education this year, thanks to the new Partners In Education relationship forged this fall with Wood River Manufacturing Complex employees.

Modeled after the partnership WRMC has had with Roxana High School for the past three years, Madison High School students will be gaining workplace experience in careers many of them plan to select upon graduation. And like the Roxana High School partnership, Madison High School and WRMC have formed a committee that meets monthly to devise ways to enhance the education of students.

"We had our first contact with Madison High School last year when we did the 'Choices' program at the school," explains Tara Condon-Tullier, Community Relations Analyst. "Madison Principal Robert Mehelic was impressed with the program and asked if we could partner with his school. A few months later, the merge was made."

Just like the partnership with

Roxana High School, Madison's P.I.E. committee must first decide how money will be spent and evaluate if Wood River has any equipment to donate. The committee also will consider which learning events, such as Shadow Day, would be beneficial to students.

"We see what we can help them with and, in turn, they learn about us and what we can offer them," says Howard Olsen, Manager Hydroprocessing. "We start slowly because it takes time for both sides to agree as to what action to take."

Already, Madison High School students have benefitted from a Career Fair, held in October, in which 15

WRMC employees talked about what they do for a living. Speakers at the Career Fair were: Bob Wassick, Rodrigo Gonzalez, Phyllis Mayes, Patty Banovz, Judy Blackburn, Jerry Hall, Perry Wheeler, Harry Mason, Barlow Harris, Linda Thorpe, Beth Daliege, Bob Miller, Wayne Michalik, Gill Wimberly and Sally Vollintine.

Four Madison High School graduates, now employees at WRMC, serve on the Madison High School P.I.E. committee, as well as several others. Committee members are: Greg Gudac, John Hamm, Dave McKinney, Howard Olsen, Linda Thorpe, Jacob Young, John Mangoff, Susan Dodd and Tara Condon-Tullier.

Jerry Hall (left) was one of 15 Wood River employees who went to Madison High School's Career Fair in October. Jerry discussed his career as a pipefitter/welder.

UNITED WAY Employee Campaign

United Way Helps The Young And Old

This year's Wood River United Way Campaign brought home the message that United Way dollars help people of all ages, especially the very young and the very old. And as in years past, the people of Shell Wood River responded generously.

The 1992 WRMC United Way Employee Campaign kicked off in early September with a picnic at Kendall Hill. Many Wood River employees and their families were on hand to enjoy the fun and games.

This year, campaign co-chairs introduced a new concept—the involvement of WRMC retirees. “We felt it was time to ask our retirees to help us in our endeavor to help others,” explains Bill Thompson, United Way Co-chairman. “Retirees are a very important segment of the Shell Wood River family.”

The River Bend United Way goal for 1992 is $1.9 million. The goal set for the Complex this year is to beat last year's pledge of nearly $215,000. “In these hard economic times, it's a goal that won't be easily met,” says Thompson. “But we know our employees and retirees will do all they can to help the agencies supported by the United Way.”

Here's a look at some of the fun Wood River employees and retirees had at the United Way kickoff, held Sept. 8.

WRMC Sponsors IEPA Internship Program

Wood River Manufacturing Complex formed an innovative partnership with the State of Illinois this summer, by sponsoring three students to the Governor's Environmental Corps, an internship that exposes students to issues and careers in the environmental field. The pilot program was developed by Governor Jim Edgar and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Thirty-two high school and college students from throughout Illinois participated in the privately funded program, which ended Aug. 7. Most of the students worked at the IEPA's Springfield office and several were based at IEPA regional offices. During the program, students were assigned to work in a specific area of the IEPA, such as water pollution control, legal counsel and pollution prevention.

As part of the internship, the Shell-sponsored students visited the Complex for a refinery overview, tour and introduction to safety and environmental programs. The students returned to WRMC for further discussions on the environmental program and one-to-one meetings with Shell engineers.

Shell was one of 10 companies to fund the Governor's Environmental Corps. ■

Reminder To Join The Employee Health Team Fitness Program

In February, the Employee Health Team introduced the WRMC Fitness Program to help employees and their families maintain good health. The ongoing program includes a binder with modules on heart rate, body fat, stretching, walking, and a beginner's guide to weight training. The Fitness Program will soon introduce new modules on dancing, fighting fat, aerobics, bicycling, jogging, swimming, sleep and blood pressure.

"The Employee Health Team will continue to put together modules that consist of the latest, up-to-date information on fitness activities and health-related matters," says Martin Pease, Employee Health Team member. "The information is free, so we hope more employees will sign up and use this information to get themselves, as well as their families, into great physical shape."

Firefighter and RAM Of Year Named

Two Wood River Manufacturing Complex employees recently were selected to receive two of Shell's highest honors. Dave Hays, Garage Mechanic 1 in Maintenance-Shops, was named Firefighter of the Year, and Mike Gutierrez, Quality Assurance Tester in Quality Assurance, was named RAM (Rescue and Medical Squad) of the Year.

Larry Snell, Manager Health & Safety, says the men were selected for this award by their peers. "The volunteer crew members chose to honor Dave and Mike for their outstanding contributions to the volunteer fire crew and the rescue and medical squad," he says. "Voluntary participation in these very necessary programs is crucial to the health and safety of employees at the Complex. We thank all members of these squads, including this year's winners of these prestigious awards."

Dave Hays (right) also received a plaque to mark his selection as Firefighter of the Year for 1992.

Milestones Around The Complex

Congratulations to the following departments who reached significant milestones of years without a recordable injury between the second quarter of 1992 and now. Let's work individually and collectively to increase our focus on prevention and continue to set safety milestones like the ones shown here!

Ask Me About Volunteering

The theme "Ask Me About Volunteering" was prevalent throughout Wood River Manufacturing Complex on Sept. 30. Scores of Shell employees passed through the cafeteria to learn more about volunteer opportunities in their community.

Fifteen local agencies set up displays and handed out material on their volunteer needs. The displays were shown by groups ranging from the United Way to Operation Blessing.

"This was a terrific opportunity for employees to learn more about local agencies while raising the awareness of volunteer opportunities in their community," explains Tara

Condon-Tullier, Community Relations Analyst. "It just makes sense to become more aware of our local not-for-profit agencies."

WRMC hopes to host several more volunteer fairs in the future, Condon-Tullier says.

Volunteer Mary Roberts (seated) provides information about Shell's SERVE program to some interested visitors during the Volunteer Fair.

A group of volunteers got together recently to create a float of a "haunted" Shell station. The float was featured in the Alton Halloween parade and in Madison High School's Homecoming parade.

WRMC Pensioner's Luncheon Another Success

WRMC's retirees came out in force for the 26th Annual Pensioner's Luncheon, held at the American Legion Hall in Edwardsville on Sept. 16.

The featured guest speaker was Bill Haine, Madison County State's Attorney. Manufacturing Complex Manager Gayle Johnson also spoke at the event, keeping pensioners apprised of Shell Oil's future plans.

"I believe our retirees really enjoy these opportunities to get together and talk about old times," says Joe Lanzerotti, coordinator of the event. "The Pensioner's Luncheon is a favorite among our Shell retirees."

A Moment In History

Monday, Oct. 5, was kick-off day for conversion of the former Research Diagnostic Lab building to the permanent location of Wood River Manufacturing Complex's History Museum.

About 20 retired volunteers and current employees gathered at 8 a.m., to begin cleaning up inside and outside facilities. Following a safety briefing by Complex Safety personnel, crafts workers commenced dismantling and stripping out obsolete equipment and piping. Other volunteers raked and mowed and generally cleaned the outside grounds, and kept inside floors swept free of debris for the crafts workers.

The group designated Mondays and Wednesdays, from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., as regular work days. To date, about 15 to 20 people are helping with the project. "We're very pleased with the response, and we enjoy working together," says History Museum curator Andy Dick. "We also appreciate the support we have received from current Shell employees."

If you would like to volunteer your help in this effort, just come to the site of the former Research Diagnostic Lab any Monday or Wednesday for a work assignment. Darryl Ottwell is the renovation architect and general contact for the project. He can be reached at 255-2158.

The current museum facility is located on the ground floor of the Main Office Building. It's open each Wednesday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Anyone wishing to visit the museum or have an artifact or other material to contribute should contact Main Gate Security for entrance into the Main Office Building.

Retiree Stan Pohlman is one of many WRMC pensioners who donate their time and services to the History Museum project.

A Special Thank You From The Family of Tamadj Lashon Griffin

*The cross of "death" is a hard one to carry
And we continue to solicit prayers.
So many of you have already helped us
By simply being there.
Words cannot express all the gratitude
We feel within our hearts.
For all of you who participated
No matter what the part.
You've showered us with love and affection
And other charitable acts,
We'll be forever grateful for your condolences,
For your sympathy and your tact.
First, praise God who has carried us thus far
Through all our pain and tears.
For He has allowed us to love and enjoy "Tobie"
For seventeen precious years.
Then to say THANK YOU and we appreciate you
Is truly our only aim;*

*But there is just not enough space available
To write down each individual's name.
Eternally grateful,
Phyllis Mayes and Elonda Griffin*

P.S. Funeral expenses have been met and three scholarships have been established in Tamadj's name, thanks to Shell Oil's WRMC employees, retirees and contractors; Gateway East Youth Leadership Scholarship; New York Cleaners; Aldersgate Community Methodist Church; St. Paul Baptist Church. Also, the Greater St. Louis Metropolitan Urban League's Minority Youth Entrepreneurship Program Scholarship sponsored at Washington University each year has been renamed the "Tamadj L. Griffin Memorial Scholarship."

Logistics Holds Social For Employees

Employees who work in and support the Logistics Department were treated to one of two cruises on the "Becky Thatcher" in September. Some 400 employees and their spouses or dates enjoyed the trip down the Mississippi River while dancing to music and eating dinner. The cruise, which replaced the traditional Logistics Picnic, was quite successful, says Logistics Senior Secretary Cathy Barnett, who helped coordinate the event.

Here are some pictures from the Logistics cruises.
